

I just read about the proposed change in the No-call policy. I just signed up for this service last year as I now am working at home quite a bit. I find it difficult to do my JOB while these telemarketers bother me. I definitely do not want ANYONE annoying me with phone calls, even if I have had a previous business dealing with them. I also did not realize that a company can still call me JUST ONCE if I have had previous business with them. Furthermore, why are "non-profit" agencies aka "charities" exempt from this No-Call list? They are the absolute worst! They are rude, obnoxious and do not take "no" for an answer. Then someone else from their agency calls within the next few days, sometimes the same day. How may I eliminate these calls? I tell them that I do NOT want to be called, and they do anyway. Isn't this a form of harassment? I realize that the deadline for comments was February 2nd, but as I said I just read about this in the paper today. Thank you.
